

Display of Student Projects or Academic Work

The display of student projects or academic work should be done in such a manner as to conceal any graded markings from public view or for safety and security reasons not identify the specific room in which a student is located.

Student work with concealed names may be displayed on walls by classrooms.

Student work with name identification may be displayed if building principals and teachers establish other appropriate areas for the display.

Teachers may display student work on walls near their rooms during parent teacher conferences or at other times when the students are not in attendance providing any grade markings are concealed from public view (Policy 506.5 Grading Guidelines).
